Concept Note

A state's foreign policy primarily focuses on interactions with other states and international actors and is essential to its political agenda. Foreign policy primarily refers to the state's approach and actions internationally. Based on the interdependence of these two domains, domestic politics play a vital role in determining a state's foreign policy. Foreign policy decisions of a country are immensely influenced by the socio-political environment of a country. The political environment of a country includes all laws, government agencies, and lobbying groups. When talking about the head of government and his decisions the most important factor is the political environment, he is operating in. Even international decisions taken by the head of government depend on domestic politics. The political system will determine the head's scope and power in foreign policy decision making. The seminar will focus on the socio-political environment of India, its decision-making process, governance, government's policy and simultaneously the influencing factors of India's foreign policy and India's relations with other countries mainly international relations with south Asian countries.

Objective of the Conference

The major objectives of these conference are

- The conference is an attempt to explore the influencing factor of India's decision-making process.
- The conference aims to understand the crisis of India's relation with south Asian countries and to make suggestions to overcome those.
- The conference aims to focus on the crisis of the socio-political environment and to suggest ways to overcome them.

It will focus on the nature and hurdles of democratic culture in south Asian countries.

Expected Outcome of the Conference

We, being the organiser of the conference, are quite optimistic about the contribution of the conference to the broader society. The conference will bring some fresh observations and findings for the survival of democratic values in south Asian countries. Moreover, we strongly believe that the conference will produce newer areas of research on Indian politics and international relations. It will also inspire young scholars and students who are the target participants of the conference itself.
